Sinful Stocks Creep Into Christian's Portfolios

Mathew 10:16 Behold I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves: be ye therefore wise as serpents and harmless as doves.

If we are only harmless as a dove we may very well get eaten alive by the wolves of the world. If we are only wise as a serpent then we may end up hurting others. The key I find in these verses is to balance both in our lives. We need the tools and wisdom to understand how to develop a portfolio, to pick investments that correlate with our objectives, personality and time horizons. This utilization of worldly knowledge, understanding how money works, is the “being wise as a serpent” part of the formula.

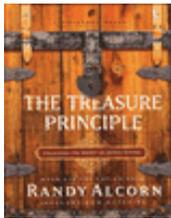

We also need to be aware of the impact our investments have in our lives and the lives of others. By being conscious of what we are participating in and supporting with our investment dollars we can choose the investment products that don't compromise our personal beliefs, that don't harm others. Utilizing care and compassion is the “being harmless as a dove” part of the formula.”

Investing with Integrity

By Mark Minnella Jr.

Several years ago on Wall Street, a group of faith-driven investors stepped out from the crowd and tried to convince people that there was more to investing than just making money. By adding a screening process to their stock selections in order to ensure that their clients were not investing in companies whose product and services were contrary to their beliefs; they were able to integrate their investment objectives into their faith. The only problem was convincing the public that putting their personal convictions first, didn't mean sacrificing their returns. Without the published numbers and graphs to prove their success, Faith Based Investors seemed to have slid out of sight of the investing public.

For the first time, faithful investors have a solid foothold on Wall Street. This last July, at the yearly conference of the National Association of Christian Financial Consultants in Virginia Beach, the first "Biblically responsible" stock index was publicly announced by Mark Minnella, President of Integrity Investors L.L.C. The I-dex (pronounced "eye-decks") is the first publicly accessible index that actively tracks only companies who have passed a screening process based on biblically accepted principals. It was the brain child of Mark Minnella and together with Michael Chavez was originally implemented to answer the question "Can a portfolio of stocks, consisting only of companies who pass a rigorous, biblically-based screening, compete financially with the "anything goes" mentality of Wall Street?" The answer was an overwhelming "YES". Since January of this year, the I-dex, consisting of over 250 biblically screened companies, has been competing on par or better than other major U.S. Indices such as the S&P 500.

Although still in its early stages, the I-dex is already being held as a new standard in the Faith Based Investing arena because it is the first time that Faith Based Investors have had a clear method of benchmarking their performance according to the methods used in their industry. It is also, only the first in a line of indices, which Integrity Investors L.L.C. plans to unveil in the next year.

Words From The Master

The Parable of the Talents

Matthew 25:14-30

"Again, it will be like a man going on a journey, who called his servants and entrusted his property to them. To one he gave five talents of money, to another two talents, and to another one talent, each according to his ability." (Matthew 25:14-15)

Upon his return the master rewarded the servant with the five talents;

Well done, good and faithful slave; you were faithful with a few things,

I will put you in charge of many things, enter into the joy of your master" (Matthew 25:21)

The master was pleased, not because of the amount that the servant had to work with, but because of what he did with what he was given "according to his ability". The servant with only two talents received the same reward as the servant with five. They were rewarded for faithfully managing what possessions the master saw fit to put them in charge of.

Selecting pictures or graphics is an important part of adding content to your newsletter.

Think about your article and ask yourself if the picture supports or enhances the message you're trying to convey. Avoid selecting images that appear to be out of context.

Microsoft Publisher includes thousands of clip art images from which you can choose and import into your newsletter. There are also several tools you can use to draw shapes and symbols.

Once you have chosen an image, place it close to the article. Be sure to place the caption of the image near the image.

If your newsletter is folded and mailed, this story will appear on the back. So, it's a good idea to make it easy to read at a glance.

A question and answer session is a good way to quickly capture the attention of readers. You can either compile questions that you've received since the last edition or you can summarize some generic questions that are frequently asked about your organization.

A listing of names and titles of managers in your organization is a good way to give your newsletter a personal touch. If your organization is small, you may want to list the names of all employees.

If you have any prices of standard products or services, you can include a listing of those here. You may want to refer your readers to any other forms of communication that you've created for your organization.

You can also use this space to remind readers to mark their calendars for a regular event, such as a breakfast meeting for vendors every third Tuesday of the month, or a biannual charity auction.

If space is available, this is a good place to insert a clip art image or some other graphic.
